

A PRACTICAL PSYCHOLOGY TALK

When nerves show up

How to present before you feel ready

CLASS PRESENTATION

3 MINUTES

Zara

Psychology · student voice

01 / THE FEELING IS INFORMATION

Your body is trying to help.

A racing heart can feel like a stop sign. Try reading it as energy you can steer.

THE ALARM

“Everyone will notice
I’m nervous.”

A prediction, not a fact.

A USEFUL REPLY

“I can feel nervous and still explain one idea.”

The goal is to speak with nerves present.

Make the first step small.

01

Feet

Feel both feet on the floor.

02

Exhale

Let the out-breath be easy and unforced.

03

First line

Say your opening sentence once, slowly.

04

One person

Picture explaining it to one kind classmate.

No perfect calm required. Just a next sentence.

A simple shape for a short talk.

If you lose your place: pause, glance at the next heading, continue.

Confidence can come later.

You can be nervous and still be clear, thoughtful, and prepared.

MY OPENING

“I want to look at why speaking nerves show up —
and one small way to keep going anyway.”

Thanks for listening.

Zara · Psychology